Nanni supports Watever association

The Nicolas Claris' exhibition in Bouliac that will take place from November 14th to March 1st 2014 at Saint James gallery is the occasion for Nanni to support the humanitarian association Watever.

Nicolas Claris has been Watever's photographer all along a human adventure in Bangladesh last February. He was there to capture local people moments in their day to day life in the maritime and river context.

Watever is aimed at helping poor populations living alongside oceans and rivers by developing "Useful Floating Solutions" adapted to their climatic, social and economic situations. Here relies Nanni's interest in its action.

Watever is working directly with the beneficiary population by sharing skills: the most advanced technology added to the traditional know-how. Its action is focused on three main areas: R&D, technical support and shipbuilding training.
